( Part 1 )

Promoting domestic and inbound tourism in Japan is an important way of boosting the economies of small towns and cities. Many people visit Japan for its world-famous and historically important places like Tokyo and Kyoto, but there are also many beautiful areas outside of these cities that tourists can enjoy. There are several ways to encourage tourists to visit these less well-known parts of the country.

One method is to promote local tourist attractions. Many small towns have their own unique historical sites, natural scenery, and traditional festivals. These places can be advertised on social media, websites, and travel brochures to reach more people. Sharing photos and videos of local food, scenery, and events on social media can be very effective, especially with younger tourists.

Improving transportation can also help increase tourism. Some smaller towns are currently difficult to reach by high-speed trains and buses. If more buses or trains connect these areas to the major cities and airports, more people will be able to visit them. Easy access to information, maps, and travel guides in multiple languages will also help foreign tourists reach their destination.

Finally, organizing special events can also attract visitors. Local festivals, traditional performances, and seasonal events, such as cherry blossom viewing or autumn festivals, can bring more tourists to smaller towns. Of course big cities such as Tokyo and Kyoto have similar festivals, but events in rural areas are unique to that area and are often less crowded, meaning that tourists can enjoy the local culture at a slower pace.

In conclusion, promoting local attractions, improving transportation, and organizing special events are great ways to boost local tourism. By helping people discover the beauty and culture of less well-known areas, the benefits of tourism can be enjoyed more evenly across the country, and problems due to over-tourism can be avoided.

Owning a pet can be a rewarding experience, but it also comes with challenges. There are several advantages and disadvantages to having a pet, and it's important to consider both before deciding to get one.

One of the biggest advantages is that the pet can be a companion. Pets, especially dogs and cats, can give emotional support. They are always with us and can make us feel less lonely. Many people say that their pets become like family members, offering comfort during difficult times. Pets can also help improve mental health by reducing stress and anxiety. For example, playing with a dog or petting a cat can make people feel happier.

Another benefit of owning a pet is the responsibility it brings. Taking care of a pet teaches people, especially children, how to be responsible. Pets need food, water, and exercise every day. This routine can help people develop good habits. Owning a pet can also be a great way to stay active, as pets like dogs need to go for walks regularly.

However, there are also disadvantages to owning a pet. One disadvantage is the cost. Pets can be expensive to care for, as they need food, vaccinations, and sometimes medical treatment. The cost can add up over time. Another disadvantage is the time commitment. Pets need attention, and this can sometimes be difficult for people with busy schedules. For example, dogs need to be walked multiple times a day, and cats need daily care. If you travel a lot, finding someone to care for your pet can also be a challenge.

In conclusion, while owning a pet has many benefits, such as companionship and responsibility, it also requires time, effort, and money. It's important to weigh both the advantages and disadvantages before deciding to get a pet.

Anna and Mike are talking about their new campus life and the clubs they have joined.

Anna : Hey, Mike! How's campus life treating you so far?

Mike : Hey, Anna! It's been pretty good, but a little overwhelming at times. There's always something going on, and it's hard to keep up. How about you?

Anna : Yeah, I totally get that. It's busy, but I'm starting to get used to it. ( 30 ) No one's telling you what to do all the time.

Mike : Exactly! I love that I can choose my own schedule and decide when to study or hang out with friends. But sometimes, it's hard to stay focused with so many activities around.

Anna : Oh, for sure! There are so many clubs, events, and parties. ( 31 )

Mike : I joined the photography club! It's been fun so far. We get to go around campus and take pictures of different events. ( 32 )

Anna : I joined the debate club. I wasn't sure at first, but it's really helping me with public speaking. It's also a great way to meet people from different majors.

Mike : That's awesome! It's nice to meet people outside of class. Sometimes it feels like we're stuck in a bubble with only our classmates.

Anna : Totally. Speaking of classes, how are yours going? Are you managing the workload okay?

Mike : It's a lot, but I'm getting the hang of it. Time management is key. I've started using a planner to keep track of assignments and deadlines. It helps a lot.

Anna : ( 33 ) I keep forgetting about readings and assignments until the last minute.

Mike : Yeah, it really helps with staying organized. But even with that, it's tough balancing everything - classes, social life, and part-time work.

Anna : I know! Sometimes it feels like there's not enough time in the day. But I guess that's part of the experience, right?

Mike : Yep, we're learning how to juggle everything. ( 34 )

Anna : Exactly! And it's pretty fun figuring it all out.
